SPCA backs cruelty charges

Animal welfare. Crown will ultimately decide whether dog walker will head to court over deaths of six pooches

Four of the dogs that died after being left in the back of a dog walker's truck. CONTRIBUTED

The dog walker who lied to police after six dogs died in her care should be charged with animal cruelty, the B.C. SPCA announced Monday.

The Lower Mainland woman initially claimed the dogs had been stolen from under a secure canopy in the back of her pickup truck at an off-leash dog park in Langley when she went to use the bathroom, but last week she admitted to Petsearchers Canada that the dogs died from being left in the truck on a hot day. The dog's bodies were found buried in Abbotsford.

Enough evidence has been obtained to recommend six separate animal-cruelty charges under the Criminal Code, the B.C. SPCA's Marcie Moriarty said in a statement. The RCMP is also investigating the woman for public mischief.

The B.C. SPCA will complete its report and submit its recommendations to Crown counsel in the next few weeks.

"Obviously, the ultimate decision about whether or not charges will be laid rests with Crown counsel, but the preliminary necropsy results and other evidence gathered in our investigation so far supports our recommendation," Moriarty said.

In the meantime, the B.C. SPCA urges anyone who sees a distressed animal in a car on a warm or humid day to ask nearby stores to page customers, or to call the animal-cruelty hotline at 1-855-622-7722 or the local police department.

The B.C. SPCA is a non-profit that investigates nearly 8,000 complaints of animal abuse and neglect annually.

Rotating strikes begin amid familiar rhetoric

Teachers. Employer's association ready to bargain 'any time, anywhere'

MATT KIELTYKA
matt.kieltyka@metronews.ca

Teachers at New Westminster Secondary School set up their picket line, patrolled the perimeter of the school and waved at honking motorists Monday as the first day of rotating teacher strikes across the province began.

It's become an all-too familiar scene in British Columbia, where the B.C. Teachers' Federation and the B.C. Public School Employers' Association (BCPSEA) — and government — have been at odds for more than a decade.

This latest strike action sees both sides repeating familiar lines as the current deal for teachers — which came after similar strike action last year — finishes at the end of June without an agreement in sight.

"We want to see a negotiated settlement and BCPSEA is ready to bargain 24/7, any time, anywhere," said Education Minister Peter Fassbender in a statement. "BCPSEA has a fair offer on the table. However, the BCTF leadership is asking for a pay increase and other benefits that are more than four times what other public section unions have recently settled for."

BCTF president Jim Iker, who was making the rounds visiting teachers on the picket lines Monday morning before returning to scheduled bargaining sessions in the afternoon, says teachers are willing to compromise but government continues to ignore their request to negotiate class size and composition.

"We need them to move on this issue, and they've been unwilling to," said Iker. "We're looking for a fair deal for teachers, which includes better supports for students. We'll be at the table and we've got some important issues that need to be dealt with."

Rotating strikes continue throughout the province through Thursday.

The two sides will also be before the Labour Relations Board Thursday, where the union is challenging a proposed 10 per cent wage cut to striking teachers.

More bargaining sessions are scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday.

Woman pleads with public for life-saving kidney transplant

No matches among family. B.C. Transplant says public appeals are getting more common

thandi.fletcher@metronews.ca

A Port Coquitlam woman who desperately needs a new kidney is appealing to the public for help finding a match.

Adrienne Pace, 43, says her husband and other family members were ruled out as suitable donors. She has decided to ask members of the public to get tested and see if anyone is a willing match.

"I need a kidney or else I'll die," she said.

Pace, who undergoes three-hour dialysis sessions six times a week, says she has only months left to live. The veins in her arms are no longer accessible for dialysis, she said.

Although doctors have placed a tube in a vein in her neck for the treatment, she said the process is "painful as hell." She could also develop an infection, she said.

This is Pace's second time on the transplant wait-list. Diagnosed in 1994 with renal failure, she spent seven years on the list the first time. But in 2011, an abdominal bleed caused her new kidney to stop working and landed her back on the wait-list.

Although she is at the top of the list now, the wait she faced for her first kidney has her worried she won't make it that long.

While it isn't encouraged, Peggy John of B.C. Transplant says more people are turning to social media in their search for an organ donor.

"It is a way to cast a wider net," said John.

In B.C., there are close to 400 people on the wait-list in need of a kidney, said John. In 2013, 127 people in B.C. received kidneys from living donors.

While reasons for donating a kidney vary, John said the benefit is always the same: a chance to save someone's life.

"It's karma for life," she said.

Adrienne Pace of Port Coquitlam says she has only a few panful months left to live. CONTRIBUTED

Taxpayer group questions city's consultant fees

Lack of competition?
Canadian Taxpayer Federation director scrutinizes coaching costs for politicians

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

The B.C. director of the Canadian Taxpayers Federation is raising concerns over the number of untendered contracts received by a City of Vancouver consultant.

Business coach and consultant Linda Oglov received $295,535 from the city and the Vancouver Economic Commission between April 2010 and May 2013, according to documents the CTF's Jordan Bateman received through a freedom-of-information request.

The lion's share of the work was for the Vancouver Economic Commission, a separate body that makes its own decisions, although it received $2.9 million in funding from the city in 2013 and 2014, according to city budgets.

But the fees included corporate management workshops and a $4,480 business coaching fee in 2012 for the park board chair.

Bateman said he's never seen coaching expenses for politicians and questioned why the same business consultant is repeatedly getting contracts.

"There are many excellent consultants in Vancouver who might be able to do it for cheaper with new fresh ideas," he said.

But the city says Oglov did indeed successfully bid in a public procurement process to pre-qualify for organizational development and coaching in August 2012, although this does not explain the prior work.

The city also notes that most of the fees paid to Oglov were under $5,000. The city only issues formal bids for contracts over $75,000.

Secure bike parking opens at hospital, SkyTrain

Bike-to-work week kicked off Monday with Vancouver General Hospital and Main Street-Science World SkyTrain station showcasing new cycling facilities that make it easier for people to travel on two wheels.

The hospital converted a long, unused laundry building into a cycling centre for hospital staff and volunteers, complete with 182 secure bike-parking stalls, men's and women's change rooms and showers, 105 storage lockers and a bike repair zone.

The facility along the 10th Avenue bike route will charge membership fees of $3 to $11 depending on usage. The fees will cover all operating costs. Depending on internal use, the public might be able to pay to access the facility.

"We believe health and environmental sustainability are closely linked," said a statement from Anne Harvey, Vancouver Coastal Health's vice-president of employee engagement.

"As a health authority, it's important for us to support this relationship wherever we can since it has important benefits to population health."

Local cycling advocacy group HUB supports the project, saying it will pay for itself in reducing health-care costs by improving the fitness of employees who bike to work.

Cyclists that commute farther east can also look forward to secure bike parking at Main Street-Science World.

TransLink has built an indoor facility with more than 80 racks so people can park their bikes for just $1 per day (to a maximum of $8 per month) before hopping on transit. Such facilities are welcome in the cycling community, considering bike theft is a rampant problem in Vancouver — more than 1,800 were reported stolen in 2012.

It will consider building similar facilities at busy stations in the future.

To register for the secure bike parking at the SkyTrain, visit translink.ca/bikeparking. EMILY JACKSON/METRO

Chief of defence claims military knows location of kidnapped girls

Abuja, Nigeria. Military official won't elaborate on location of students, suggests using force to rescue them will result in their deaths

Nigeria's chief of defence, Air Marshal Alex Barde, centre, speaks in Abuja, Nigeria, Monday during a demonstration calling on the government to rescue the kidnapped girls of a government school. GBENGA OLAMIKAN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nigeria's military has located nearly 300 schoolgirls abducted by Islamic extremist group Boko Haram, but fears using force to try to free them could get them killed, the country's chief of defence said Monday.

Air Marshal Alex Barde told demonstrators that Nigerian troops can save the girls. But he added, "We can't go and kill our girls in the name of trying to get them back."

He spoke to thousands of demonstrators who marched to Defence Ministry headquarters in Abuja, the capital. Many were brought in on buses, indicating it was an organized event.

Asked by reporters where they had found the girls, Barde refused to elaborate.

"We want our girls back. I can tell you we can do it. Our military can do it. But where they are held, can we go with force?" he asked the crowd.

People roared back, "No!"

"If we go with force what will happen?" he asked.

"They will die," the demonstrators said.

"Nobody should come and say the Nigerian military does not know what it is doing. We know what we are doing," Barde insisted.

Nigeria's military and government have faced national and international outrage over their failure to rescue the girls seized by Boko Haram militants from a remote northeastern school six weeks ago.

President Goodluck Jonathan was forced this month to accept international help. American planes have been searching for the girls. Britain, France, Israel and other countries have sent experts in surveillance and hostage negotiation. Jonathan's reluctance to accept help for weeks is seen as unwillingness to have outsiders looking in on what is considered a corrupt force. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Birth, death data vital for health of children, mothers

For one million babies born every year, it's as if they were never here.

That's how many newborns die on the day of their birth, along with millions more in their first month of life, all without ever having been formally documented.

The lack of vital birth and death registration in poor countries will be a major topic of discussion at this week's international meeting on improving the plight of children, newborns and mothers in developing countries.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is hosting the three-day conference in Toronto.

Rosemary McCarney, the co-chair of the Canadian Network for Maternal Newborn and Child Health, says birth registration is a key to making progress on the issue.

She says knowing about births, deaths and cause of death is key to bringing down mortality rates and improving the health of the most vulnerable women and children in poor countries. THE CANADIAN PRESS

A Manitoba woman is suing six RCMP officers, claiming they pulled her from a shower and left her shivering and naked in her kitchen during a search of her home.

The woman alleges in a lawsuit filed last week that the September 2012 incident has left her with post-traumatic stress disorder, fear of being alone and a fear of showering, as well as emotional trauma.

The lawsuit alleges the woman was taken from her main-floor bathroom shower during the mid-morning raid and kept in custody, without any clothing, in the kitchen while police searched her home.

"The plaintiff was kept in the kitchen without access to covers for a period of time," the statement of claim says. "The plaintiff began hyperventilating and experiencing shock-like symptoms."

It claims the woman, who works as a hospital medical technician, was eventually taken to hospital in an ambulance. She is seeking unspecified damages, including punitive damages and costs.

Quoted

"The plaintiff began hyperventilating and experiencing shock-like symptoms."

Statement of claim from Manitoba woman, who alleges RCMP officers left her naked in her kitchen while they searched her home

"As a result of the injuries which the plaintiff received from the defendants, the plaintiff has suffered out-of-pocket expenses including loss of wages in an amount to be proven at trial," the lawsuit says.

The lawsuit says Mounties raided the house while executing a search warrant as part of an investigation, but does not elaborate. Daniel Minuk, the woman's lawyer, declined to comment on the lawsuit or its allegations.

Tara Seel, media relations officer with the RCMP, said it would be inappropriate to comment since the matter is now before the courts.

No statement of defence has been filed. The woman's claims have not been proven in court. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Baird says Turks and Caicos dream will remain just that

No 11th province. Though islands' premier says he's not closing the door on joining Canada, Foreign Affairs says it's not in the cards

The premier of Turks and Caicos is leaving the door open to the prospect of his country joining Canada, even though he has opposed the idea in the past.

But Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird suggested Monday that Canadians are dreaming if they think they'll have a province in the Caribbean any time soon.

Turks and Caicos Premier Rufus Ewing met Prime Minister Stephen Harper in Ottawa, where he says the two leaders spoke about exploring a more formal relationship.

Cruisegoers enjoy the beach at the Grand Turk Cruise Terminal in Grand Turk, Turks and Caicos. Turks and Caicos Premier Rufus Ewing met with Prime Minister Stephen Harper in Ottawa Monday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Ewing described the meeting as a "courtship," but said the pair did not discuss the possibility of Turks and Caicos becoming Canada's 11th province.

The idea, however, is not out of the question, Ewing suggested during a news conference following the meeting.

"It is not of my mandate to close the door," he said.

"It is my mandate to see Turks and Caicos have sustainable economic growth and development and development of our people ... and we look to Canada, who has shown by example of being a very strong democracy."

Even creating closer ties is a long shot, said Baird: The Harper government is not exploring a stronger relationship, let alone considering a plan to annex the British colonial territory.

"We're not in the business of annexing islands in the Caribbean to be part of Canada, so that's not something that we're exploring," said Baird.

"We're not looking at any sort of formal association with the islands."

Premier Rufus Ewing THE CANADIAN PRESS

Conservative MP Peter Goldring has been pushing the idea for over a decade.

Canada enjoyed strong economic ties with Turks and Caicos in the 1800s, largely through the salt trade.

More recently, however, the 40-island nation has relied more on the tourist trade and its open banking system for the economic well-being of its roughly 30,000 inhabitants.

Turks and Caicos is currently a British territory with an elected legislature.

Thai coup leader warns citizens against protests

Royal endorsement. Thailand's king endorsed its military chief to run the country and called for 'reconciliation'

Gen. Prayuth Chan-ocha speaks at his first press conference since Thursday's coup on Monday in Bangkok.
SAKCHAI LALIT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bolstered by an endorsement from Thailand's king, the nation's new military ruler issued a warning Monday to anyone opposed to last week's coup: don't cause trouble, don't criticize, don't protest — or else the nation could revert to the "old days" of turmoil and violence.

Gen. Prayuth Chan-ocha defended the army's takeover, saying he had to restore order after seven months of increasingly violent confrontations between the now-ousted government and demonstrators.

"Everyone must help me," said Prayuth, adding: "do not criticize, do not create new problems. It's no use."

The words came as an aide to former Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra said she had been released Monday from military custody after being held for three days.

Earlier Monday, a royal command sent in the name of King Bhumibol Adulyadej officially endorsed Prayuth to run the country and called for "reconciliation among the people."

The endorsement is a formality, but in a country where the king's word is supreme, it is one that carries enormous weight.

Thursday's coup deposed an elected government that insisted for months that the nation's fragile democracy was under attack from protesters, the courts, and the army.

Don't hold your breath

Man crashes after fainting in tunnel

Police say a 19-year-old man caused a three-car crash when he fainted while holding his breath as he drove through a tunnel in Oregon.

Daniel J. Calhon told investigators he fainted Sunday afternoon while holding his breath in the Highway 26 tunnel near the community of Manning. His car, a Toyota Camry, crashed head-on with a Ford Explorer.

Both vehicles struck the tunnel walls before a pickup hit the Camry. Four people suffered non-life-threatening injuries. Police say Calhon has been cited for reckless driving, reckless endangerment and fourth-degree assault.

Some people hold their breaths in tunnels as part of a game or superstition.

A big special on gyms in Aisle 3!

Fitting in fitness.
You can work on your six-pack for free, and pick up a six-pack, at one Albany, N.Y., grocery store

When Ann Lawson strolls into her neighbourhood grocery store, she really gets a workout.

That's because her Hannaford supermarket has a small gym located just past the pharmacy counter. It has treadmills, stationary bicycles, various other cardio machines, even a state-of-the-art Zumba room with a shiny wooden floor.

And best of all, it's free.

"It's about me getting healthy and losing some of this excess weight," Lawson said. "And I like the idea of being able to work out and shop in one trip."

Maine-based Hannaford insists the 5,600-square-foot health facility that opened in October is not part of some shrewd marketing campaign. The Albany, N.Y., store is the only one in the 184-store chain with such a gym, and there are no plans for more.

The idea grew out of a meeting last summer between Hannaford, the local YMCA and the health-care provider Capital District Physicians' Health Plan. All said their goal was to come up with something to improve the area's health while also being convenient, accessible and free.

BUT WHICH BRO ARE YOU, BRO?

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

The world of online dating is a wondrous novelty to me. I'm not sure if I would have ended up with my own significant other — whom I met unromantically, at a bar — if I had relied on a digital matchmaking service that allows you to filter potential partners by age, race, religion, geography, height, body type and annual income.

Sophisticated algorithms might help users narrow down their search, but we all know that a carefully selected profile photo can make or break your chances of finding a date. Some sites such as Match.com and eHarmony allow users to post an entire catalogue of images, while popular matchmaking app Tinder limits users to just five well-chosen snapshots.

I spent the weekend scrolling through profiles on various digital dating services with a few of my single girlfriends — in the name of research, of course — to find out what influences a woman's decision to swipe right and say yes to a date. In the course of this exceedingly important investigation, I discovered there are numerous things that make women cringe when it comes to first-impression photos.

The top five things all the single ladies really don't want to see on your profile:

• Your ex: It's perplexing to see how many men think posting a romantic vacation photo with their ex-girlfriend might help them snag a date. I don't care if you look incredibly handsome in that picture in front of the Eiffel Tower; coupled-up images suggest you are still invested in your previous relationship or have absolutely no idea how to upload new content to the Internet.

• Group shots: We get it, you love your bros. You have so many bros, but which bro are you, bro? Dating websites feature thousands of men; your individual profile should be about you and not your posse of pals. Stick to solo images to avoid confusion.

• Photos of your stuff: Most women aren't looking to date your motorcycle or your dog and if they are, well they probably still want to see YOU posing with your prized possessions. Uploading standalone images of your condo interior won't help you turn that bachelor pad into a love nest any time soon.

• Bicep snaps: It can be hard to find a good collection of recent pictures of yourself, but please stop with the not-so-discrete snapshots of you flexing at the gym. According to a survey by dating website Zoosk, a man is 19 per cent more likely to receive a message from a woman if he posts an image of himself doing something outdoors. So step away from the mirror and get outside.

• Archival images: It doesn't take a detective to figure out that a 36-year-old man who uploads a snapshot of himself doing a keg stand at a frat party might be stuck in the past. Remember that you're looking for someone to date you, not "20 pounds ago and with way more hair" you. Avoid disappointment by being honest with yourself and potential love interests.

Five Bengal white tiger cubs born on April 25 were unveiled to the public at the White Zoo in Kernhof, Austria, on Monday. RONALD ZAK/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cubs make their grand entrance

A litter of rare tigers made their debut at a zoo in Austria.

According to the zoo, it's the first time five white tiger cubs were born in a single litter in Europe. The four female and one male are all healthy and doing well.

"We are very, very proud and very happy, because they are totally normal, there is nothing wrong (with them)," said zoo director Herbert Eder. WPTV.COM

Rare beauty makes them targets

The cubs' mother, named Burani, was brought to the zoo from Germany three years ago and this is her third litter.

The father, named Samir, has fathered 14 cubs.

Eder says, "They are not hand-tamed, and not together with people; they are together with their mother."

The white tigers' unique colour means they're targeted by poachers and nearly extinct in the wild. WPTV.COM

By the numbers

There are only a small quantity of white tigers in existence and the current population is estimated at approximately 500. With the inevitable inbreeding problems, a debate continually rages over the wisdom of breeding this animal.

See that symbol? It means you can scan the photo below with your Metro News app. Charlize Theron takes aim at a few targets!

SCENE 2

Charlize Theron risks it all for a Million Ways to Die

Wild, wild western. The Oscar winner risked life and limb to bring Seth MacFarlane's spoof A Million Ways to Die in the West to life, but was it worth it?

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

While you might think Seth MacFarlane had to chase down Charlize Theron to convince her to co-star in his cowboy comedy, A Million Ways to Die in the West, the Oscar-winning actress insists it was the other way around.

"I got to read this pretty early on," she says of the script for the film, which skewers old-fashioned westerns and life on the frontier.

"Just the idea of doing something that's pitched in this very unusual way of a comedy-western situation and him at the helm of that, that to me was very intriguing. So I definitely did some chasing."

But a few weeks on location in New Mexico, risking life and limb, quickly had Theron rethinking her decision.

Storm's a brewin'

"I felt like it was like biblical times, and we were all going to die a horrible death by weather."

Charlize Theron, actress, on weather issues while filming in New Mexico

Anna (Charlize Theron) and Albert (Seth MacFarlane) try not to die at the fair in A Million Ways to Die in the West, the new comedy from director, producer and co-writer MacFarlane. UNIVERSAL PICTURES

"Look, it's a gorgeous place. I understand why you want to paint it. I would want to paint it. I don't necessarily want to go and shoot in it again. It's just like the weather was unbelievable. I felt like it was like biblical times, and we were all going to die a horrible death by weather," she says. "I mean, there was a night where we shot, and Seth left before me. I got a text from him that literally just said, 'The road is washing away! Get out of your trailer right now and start driving!' And I was like, 'I'm going to die on this movie.'"

Of course, all that risking life and limb can help bring a cast together, and Theron is particularly fond of her co-stars on this one, including MacFarlane, Neil Patrick Harris, Giovanni Ribisi, Sarah Silverman and Amanda Seyfried.

"There really wasn't a bad apple in the bunch. It really was just a bunch of great people together having fun, working hard, there for the right reasons, wanting to make the movie the best they possibly could," Theron says. "We laughed a lot, and drank a lot, and almost died together a lot. So we are bonded for life."

One particular co-star does stand out: Taken star Liam Neeson, who plays villainous outlaw Clinch Leatherwood.

"I think all of us were a little star-struck," she admits. "There was definitely that [whispering], 'Liam's here. Yeah?' 'I saw a car by his trailer.' 'Is he here?' 'Is he coming to set?' 'Wow.' Like, trying to be cool when I met first him. There's something about him. He is not just the one-dimensional actor, no matter what he does. And I think that's why people are so endeared by him and why you emotionally tap into him, no matter what he plays. And he plays the baddie in this so convincingly, but there's a realness about him. He's not putting it on. It's always coming from a place of understanding and empathy. It's not plastered or mechanical."

DVD review

Super Duper Alice Cooper

Directors. Reginald Harkema, Scot McFadyen, Sam Dunn

Stars. Alice Cooper

Fans of original shock rocker Alice Cooper, well served by this loving chronicle by Reginald Harkema, Scot McFadyen and Sam Dunn, may be surprised to learn that the frontman didn't strut fully formed out of a 1970s gateway from hell.

First he was art nerd Vince Furnier, a preacher's son from Arizona, who got his stage name from a Ouija board, band outfits from the Ice Capades and attitude from a "moral compass" that could also point to the dark side.

The doc's funniest moments chronicle his early days, including his performance epiphany in Detroit, his actual birthplace, where he feels audiences first really got his band's blend of music and Grand Guignol theatre: garish eye makeup, faked onstage executions (with a realistic guillotine and hangman's noose), dead baby dolls and other plastic cadavers strewn about.

You'll laugh, you'll cry, but oh you billion dollar babies, you'll rawk.

Extras include deleted scenes and rarely seen concert footage. PETER HOWELL

A lighter shade of Lana

Lana Del Rey has just released the second single from her new album Ultraviolence, which is slated for release on June 16. The breathy single, Shades of Cool, was written by Rick Nowels, with whom the singer collaborated on the tracks Summertime Sadness and Young and Beautiful from her previous album. Ultraviolence was produced by Black Keys singer Dan Auerbach. "We bumped heads a little bit," Auerbach confided in the magazine MOJO. "But at the end of the day we were dancing to the songs." AFP

Playing with privacy. Hacker hero video game Watch Dogs to be let loose

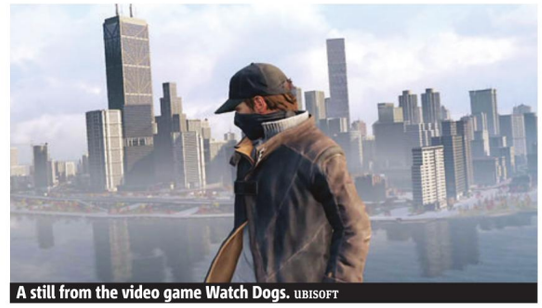
Hacker-themed video game Watch Dogs makes its hotly anticipated debut on Tuesday in a world grappling with real-life fears about privacy in the Internet era.

France-based Ubisoft's new title features a protagonist who controls the world around him by hacking into systems and has generated intense buzz for eerie parallels with the storm about U.S. surveillance.

Games typically use weapons ranging from guns and swords to lasers to special powers to defeat enemies, overcome obstacles or simply score points.

But in Watch Dogs, the player-controlled antihero can access everything from the cellphone conversations and medical records of passersby to computers which control traffic lights, to advance through the game.

Set in Chicago, the game centres on Aiden Pearce, who uses his smartphone to access the city's Central Operating System, which controls everything from power grids and traffic management technology to bank accounts and phone networks.



A still from the video game Watch Dogs. UBISOFT

Ubisoft said the game, originally set for release last year, has seen strong pre-orders, suggesting it will be a big seller.

In Watch Dogs, Pearce starts off seeking revenge for a loved one, but as he finds out more about the city, through hacking into its systems and inhabitants, he becomes a "vigilante," according to Montreal-based Canadian Ubisoft developer Dominic Guay.

"Most of the hacks that we have in the game are based on stuff that's happened in the real world," Guay said.

"We just happened to give them all to a single player."

Versions of Watch Dogs have been tailored for play on Sony's new-generation PlayStation 4 and Microsoft's Xbox One as well as the previous generation of those consoles. The game can also be played on computers powered by Windows software.

Ubisoft added the ability for people playing Watch Dogs on consoles to take on in-game challenges from friends using a companion application on smartphones or tablets. AFP

Frozen becomes fifth highest-grossing film in box office history

Since its release in November 2013, Disney's seasonal animated feature Frozen has brought in over $1.219 billion at theatres worldwide, placing it ahead of Iron Man 3 in the ranking of the most lucrative global blockbusters. Iron Man 3 grossed $1.215 billion during its run in theatres.

At the top of the worldwide box-office podium are Avatar ($2.7 billion), Titanic ($1.8 billion), The Avengers ($1.5 billion) and Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2 ($1.3 billion). AFP

Ellen Page's dream man is the Biebs!?

Ellen Page has been having some weird dreams, she tells Conan O'Brien during an interview. "My anxiety dreams tend to always relate to pubic hair," Page says. "So I'll be, like, on stage getting ready to act, and I'm just in my underwear, and I just look down and it might as well be an old man's beard or something. Or I'll be topless and it will be up to my (chest). Like a reverse hairy chest." But her dreams haven't all been anxiety-inducing. For instance, there was one about Justin Bieber that she actually enjoyed. "We were in his, like, childhood home in Canada, just hanging out, and his mom came home with takeout from Ikea, and we were like, 'Yeah!'" Page explains. "We were stoked. We were like, 'Yes, our favourite!'" For the record, Page has never actually met Bieber.

Addams Family star goes bump overnight

Christina Ricci

Christina Ricci is going to be a mom. The Addams Family star is expecting her first child with husband James Heerdegen, she confirms to Entertainment Tonight. The two met while making the short-lived TV series Pan Am in 2012 and tied the knot in October 2013 in a private ceremony in New York City. Ricci has done a remarkable job of keeping the pregnancy quiet, as when she finally stepped out at LAX this weekend her baby bump was impressively far along.

Fill avocado to the very top

It's a fruit but tastes like a vegetable and is a "good" fat.
It would be such a waste not to make the most of its deliciousness.
Double up on the goodness by trying one (or all) of these eight wholesome fillings.

Wake up the palate and eat healthy, too

Sun-dried tomatoes came into their own in the '80s but they remain a killer ingredient for a reason.

They have an intense taste that wakes up the palate but they also bring with them the nutrients that a tomato is famous for.

Lycopene is an antioxidant best known for its suspected role in helping prevent prostate cancer.

But it's also been studied for its help in preventing or treating inflammation, age-related eye disease and lung conditions. Buying the tomatoes desiccated and packaged on their own is your healthiest option; they simply require plumping in hot water for 30 minutes or so before use.

The easiest choice though is to buy them in oil, drain and chop them into salads, on pizza, into any Mediterranean rice or pasta dish.

Don't toss the oil that the tomatoes come in, though! It is highly flavoured and ready to be used in salad dressings or bread dips.

Sun-dried tomatoes add a punch of 'kapow' to steak

FLASH FOOD

From your fridge to your table in 30 minutes or less

I find grilled steak kind of one-dimensional and in want of a punch. This drizzle adds moisture and a left hook of flavour that is a knockout.

Mixing together the primary ingredients to use as a marinade pulls double-duty. It protects the meal from creating harmful substances on the grill and adds flavour.

A quick addition of capers and sun-dried tomatoes makes a topping.

1. Mix together oil, vinegar, oregano, garlic, pepper, salt and mustard.

2. Pour half onto steak and rub into both sides, marinate for up to 24 hours in the fridge or 20 minutes on the counter.

3. Preheat grill or grill pan.

4. Grill steak for 2-4 minutes per side over high heat.

Ingredients

- 2 tbsp extra virgin olive oil
- 2 tbsp vinegar
- 1 tbsp oregano
- 2 cloves garlic
- 1 tsp fresh ground pepper
- 1/2 tsp kosher salt
- 1/4 cup Dijon mustard
- 4 small striploin steaks
- 1/4 cup capers
- 1/4 cup sun-dried tomatoes, oil-packed

This recipe serves six. COURTESY THERESA ALBERT

5. Meanwhile mix remaining half of oil-and-vinegar mixture with capers and drained sun dried tomatoes.

6. Spoon caper mixture over cooked steak and serve with a side salad. THERESA ALBERT IS A FOOD COMMUNICATIONS SPECIALIST AND TORONTO PERSONAL NUTRITIONIST. SHE IS @THERESAALBERT ON TWITTER AND FOUND DAILY AT MYFRIENDINFOOD.COM

Whitecaps don't shy away from physical play

The Vancouver Whitecaps will never be mistaken for a team of giants.

But they had to be pleased with how they responded in a physical and at times heated derby match against the Seattle Sounders FC on Saturday at BC Place Stadium. The match ended in a 2-2 draw, with the Whitecaps conceding a late second-half goal on a penalty that stemmed from a questionable call on captain Jay DeMerit.

Geography and history have shaped this weekend's Cascadia Cup rivalry. Not known for their size, particularly in the attacking third, the Whitecaps did well in a match that certainly didn't lack intensity.

"It was a good physical challenge for us, a good physical test and I thought we rose to the occasion. We did very well, we showed we've grown in character we're not a team of soft touch anymore," said midfielder Nigel Reo-Coker.

In a game that featured four yellow cards, one incident that stood out involved a melee near the sidelines early in the second half.

Vancouver's star midfielder Pedro Morales was hopping mad at Seattle's Gonzalo Pineda, after he knocked the ball out of the hands of Whitecaps head coach Carl Robinson, sparking a spirited meeting of the minds.

"It was a contrast of two teams' styles ... but I'm proud they matched the physicality because you know they are always going to be there, Seattle, and we've got to make sure we start to get there this year, and continue to get there and become a seasoned team," said Robinson.

NHL. New Canucks GM Jim Benning is in Toronto for NHL Scouting Combine ahead of June's draft

What is this so-called Boston Model everyone talks about? Jim Benning, the general manager of the Vancouver Canucks, said last week he had never even heard about it until he arrived in Vancouver.

Interesting because it gets talked about outside of Vancouver, too. But in outlining his plan when he was introduced last week, he mentioned how he'd like to play four lines, with a bottom-six group of forwards that plays a more physical game, while also bringing young players into the lineup.

The latter part of his vision is where the NHL Draft comes in.

Benning departed for Toronto on Sunday — a business trip he shared with reporters during his introductory press conference Friday at Rogers Arena. He's there for the NHL's Scouting Combine, which began Monday, to get a look at the crop of prospects waiting to hear their names called out at the draft later next month.

It's an extremely important draft for the Canucks. It's Benning's first with his new team, a chance to begin to put his stamp on the future of the franchise, and his lengthy background in scouting should help Vancouver when it's time to make selections.

The Canucks also have the sixth overall selection, so it's not far-fetched to think that the player they take with that pick could be an NHL-ready prospect when training camp rolls around.

But when it comes to the draft, the Canucks, under new management and one would think new direction, and with such a high pick after a disappointing season, have a chance to change the franchise's mostly shoddy history at this event over the last several years.

His trip to Toronto is one step of many ahead for Benning. He'd also like to begin interviewing for the vacant head coaching job, and meet with centre Ryan Kesler to discuss his future.

President of hockey operations Trevor Linden said it best: "We will hit the ground running, as they say. Our work starts immediately."

NHL playoffs. Kings ride early barrage to force Blackhawks to the brink

Game 4

Kings	Blackhawks

Jake Muzzin, Marian Gaborik and captain Dustin Brown scored in a dominant first period, and the Los Angeles Kings beat the Chicago Blackhawks 5-2 Monday night to take a 3-1 lead in the Western Conference final.

Muzzin and Drew Doughty each had a goal and an assist, and Jonathan Quick made 22 saves as the Kings moved to the brink of their second trip to the Stanley Cup final in three seasons with their third straight win over the defending champion Blackhawks.

Brandon Saad and Bryan Bickell scored and Corey Crawford stopped 16 shots for the Blackhawks, who didn't get rolling until they trailed 4-0 late in the second period.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
There is no point trying to predict what will happen over the next few days. Just stay calm and be ready to act when big events happen.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
You need to be a bit more serious about your cash flow situation. Tomorrow's new moon will make it clear where and how savings need to be made. No more shopping sprees for you — for now.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
With a powerful new moon in your sign over the next three days there is no way you can go wrong — and even if you do go wrong it will somehow turn out right. Aim for the sky.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
What you decide over the next few weeks, and especially over the next few days, will form the basis of your reality for the coming year. Find a quiet place where you can be alone with your thoughts.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Friendships and group activities are highlighted today and all week, so get out and mix with all sorts of people — every one of them will have something to teach you.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
If you are in any way dissatisfied with your lot, now is the time to do something about it. The approaching new moon means that changes are good for you, especially those to do with your career.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
It will feel as if a great weight has been lifted from your shoulders today. Money worries, especially, will begin to fade and you can start having fun again.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
The upcoming new moon will give you the motivation and energy you need to make a start on a project you have been flirting with for weeks, months, maybe even years.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Anything of a one-to-one nature, be it personal, professional or financial, can be changed for the better over the next few days. Romance is especially well starred.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Even you can recognize that certain ways of doing things are not working as well as they should. It's time to push your ego to one side and admit that changes are needed.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
The approaching new moon encourages you to believe that you can get away with anything. If you act as if it is true, you will no doubt do something amazing.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Over the next two or three days you will get the opportunity to find out why loved ones are so uptight. Once you know that it will be quite easy to restore harmony.
